Kuala Lumpur, 13 January

Malaysia has imposed provisional anti-dumping duties on some exports of flat-rolled iron products or non-alloy steel from China, India, Japan, and South Korea, the trade ministry said.

The duties, which take effect from January 11 and initially run for up to 120 days on products with a width of more than 600 mm (24 inches), range from 2.52 per cent to 36.80 per cent, the ministry said on Monday.

A final determination on the provisional anti-dumping duties would be made by May 10, while feedback on the preliminary determination could be submitted by January 20, the ministry added in its statement.

The decision followed an investigation begun in August into the products from China, India, Japan and South Korea that started after a petition from a domestic producer.
